UVU Media Player is a javascript-based media player designed to play streaming video on the Internet without video codec limitations. UVU Media Player allows the user to view the lowest quality streaming video encoded at 480p. This makes UVU Media Player ideal for watching video on websites with restricted access such as restricted content. UVU Media Player is a plug-in type media player. The plugin is not limited to any specific media player application. The plugin can be added to any application and it will work with any audio and video file format. UVU Media Player will decode the streaming video stream from any website. It can be used to view streaming video from any website that streams audio/video such as YouTube, MySpace, DailyMotion and many others. Packs the player and you into a single.js file which makes it easier to include in your website. No need to download a player.js file to use the player. How to use • Include the javascript file (player.js) in the header of your page. • Add the following div to the header of your page (where you want the player to appear). • Add the following css styles to the header of your page (required for player styling). #movieplayer{ width: 400px; height: 100px; position:absolute; top:50%; left:50%; -moz-transform:translate(-50%,-50%); -webkit-transform:translate(-50%,-50%); transform:translate(-50%,-50%); } • Add the following javascript code to the head of your page. player.setup("yourplayer",{ allowFullScreen:false, //hide controls opacity:0.5, hideMenu:true, //controls positioning zoom:1, }); You can choose to hide the controls, and set the opacity of the player. • When using the callback-function of the player it is best to write a function with a function name that is unique to the callback. Example: function onPlayerReady(title, videoid, currentTime){...} The player is ready when the callback is called. When you would like the player to start playing, call: player.play(); When you would like to stop the player call: player.pause();
